

A. The Situation.

1. The international situation is getting worse and more complicated with every day. Soviet Union seems having activated a mysteriously powerful looking ally, the red China, who is insolent enough to disregard our warnings and who is ready "to lose half of her population" if this would be necessary for gaining the far goal: the communist supremacy of world.
2. Communist leaders belong to the type of dictators who think that they are the wisest of all men, omnipotent, and who, therefore, allow themselves imprudent, if not insane, steps. Thus, it is ungrounded and wishful to hope that Russian communist leaders will recognize the dangerousity of their close co-operation with the red Chinese, giving Russian A-bombs to them so that they could destroy the "capitalists". Russian communist leaders may think that they themselves are very smart in letting the red Chinese destroy their own "whites" and the Americans, and be themselves halved in those fights so that the Russians would have it later easier to deal with the remaining half of Chinese.
3. We have good reasons to think and to hope that the outcome will not be that, that the communist leaders and their lieutenants will be made harmless before they get thus far. However, we must realize that they are strong and ruthless enough to cause us horrible losses before they themselves will be destroyed by their own people, if we will remain as passive as we have been till now, giving the communists good ground not to believe in our determination to defend ourselves effectively.
4. We must admit that if our threatening with "total retaliation" has had, and possibly still has, some influence on the Russian and European communist leaders, then this would not be the case with the Chinese communists who are even more fanatic than the Russian communists are.

5. If Russian communists will indeed enter talks and agree with halting of nuclear tests, then this can not be taken for proof that they have changed their mind and aims. Could this not mean that they have an agreement with red China to let the Russian tests be continued by the "Chinese who recently resettled from Soviet Union"? Red China, being not recognized by the U.S.A., would certainly not let us or anybody else in to check what they are doing at home.

B. The way Out.

1. To stand these united enemies, we must develop new tactics and new means of defense, and make use of them before it will be too late. At present we can still hope that the Russian communists fear our retaliation, but it would be much worse when they will have their ICBMs ready for use, or when the red Chinese will be ready to use the Russian A-bombs against us.
2. We must direct our blows against the "Achilles' heel" of the communists, which is common for all of them, whatever their nationality. This weak spot of the communists is their relatively small number if compared with masses that they control, their isolation from these masses, and the negative basis of their power: the fear which they rouse and propel in masses by their ruthless system of government.
3. We must isolate them even more from the masses. We must proclaim, and make real preparations for liberation of subjugated nations. We must help the masses effectively to free themselves. We shall not hope and wait that the nations would do this without our help, out of their own desperate initiative: such attempts are doomed for failure and would inevitably lead to more communist victories, like it happened in Hungary. We must organize, lead and effectively support a co-ordinated, simultaneous, global rising of masses everywhere in communist countries, so that the communists would not have any opportunities to fight the masses piecemeal, throwing their forces successively against different nests of rising.

C. How to Proceed on This Way?

1. Let us first fight our own fear that makes us overestimate the strength of our enemies. Let us see and understand that we do not need fight nations, hundreds of millions, but just a few millions of communists, with the hundreds of millions being on our side, our allies and main fighters.
 2. Declare our aim clearly: to free the subjugated nations from their communist governments, and us from the communist threat.
 3. Show the communists that this time we really mean business.
 4. Make this known not only to the communist leaders, but also, and effectively, to the nations which we will help to free themselves, and to the communist ranks so these could think it over whether to follow their communist leaders or not.
 5. Make this clear by taking necessary preparations for:
 - a) conscription of all available, able men who speak at least one language of the subjugated nations,
 - b) instructing those men to be powerful helpers and leaders, if necessary, to the local masses in their uprising,
 - c) producing necessary technical means for:
 - (1) giving effective information and guidance to the nations, and destructive propaganda shots to the communist fellow travelers and special troops.
- Do this by:
- (a) distribution of millions of leaflets by all possible ways, especially from thousands of simple, automaton airplanes or guided missiles which would distribute their loads effectively even if hit and destroyed by enemy air defense,
 - (b) numerous automaton, airborne broadcasting stations circling high over selected areas of enemy territory, too close to the listeners for being jammed effectively, and transmitting on the very frequencies of the communists' own main stations.

- (2) simultaneous transportation of great numbers of our helping nuclei commandos to their far located, prefixed areas of action;
- (3) simultaneous transportation of crack troops to areas where such massed resistance of communists is awaited, or will be reported, which the local masses and our nuclei commandos would not be able to fight successfully,
- (4) simultaneous delivery of some nuclear bombs if this will be necessary for:
 - (a) frightening the masses into action, and the communists out of action;
 - (b) destroying some most dangerous units and bases of enemy assault forces or weapons.

D. Is This Plan Realistic?

- 1. Yes, it is. We know that the communist menace is very serious. We know that half-measures won't help us. There are no technical difficulties involved in this plan that could not be solved by American brains and industry.
- 2. Effective preparations for such steps against the soft spots of the communist building should be much more dangerous for the communist leaders than could be our threatening with total retaliation. Our enemies have in the vastness of their territories good protection against our retaliation; their industries and defenses are widely distributed. Nor do communist leaders care much for lives of their people. But they have no effective defense against our steps which would free their masses from their communist inflicted fear, and against our help to the masses in their uprising, nor against the destruction of moral of their own "comrades".
- 3. By taking these steps we bolster our own moral as we will be preparing to do something positive: to free nations from slavery, whereas the communists' countersteps would all be of negative character: to enslave more nations, and this is known to their masses and can impress them but negatively.

4. By these steps we will also bolster the moral of our allies in the free world, and of the "neutrals", who at present are depressed because they have reason to fear the communists more than we have, and because they do not feel us being at present determined enough to give them the necessary help and protection when the communists would start forceful action. These nations will join us when they see that we really mean business: strength and determination, if working in positive direction, have appealing influence.

E. Is This Way Not Too Dangerous?

1. No, not to the U.S.A., although it would be for any of our less powerful partners to start. We are still reasonably well protected by the great distances, our own defenses, and the enemy's own unpreparedness for a such large scale operation in near future.
2. Even if supposing that the enemy in his desperation would start total war against us, then this would be to our advantage if he starts it soon, before his own ICBMs and masses of his far-range submarine carriers of nuclear devices would get operative, or before he could have gained some real superiority over us in any military field.
3. There certainly will be much crying about our interference into inner matters of communist countries, and us being warmongers. But this is not new. Besides, they themselves have been interfering all the time, they even threaten and prepare to bury us. We, in contrary, will not interfere to bury, but to free the nations from their grim communist undertakers.
4. Let us have our preparations so vigorous and well known that these would take wind from the sails of communist ranks, that the

they would understand how dangerous a road they are being pushed along by their communists leaders. Make the communists fear, and free ourselves and the subjugated masses from the fear. Let us caution the masses not to start any premature local action, but to be ready to start a well go-ordinated general action when we will call, soon.

5. If we achieve these goals then we will have avoided great nuclear devastations and death of tens of millions of good people on both sides, and we will have freed ourselves and other nations from the communists.
6. Even if everything would not go so smoothly, if the communists would start a desperate global war, then also, we would be in better situation than in a global war which would inevitably come, a little later, when the communists will have ready all their preparations, and when they will set the timing. In such a war, started by the communists before they themselves are ready with their most destructive future weapons, we can avoid death of many millions of our people, because our forces will be then prepared to retaliate at right time, immediately, before the communists could cause us all the suffering they have planned.
7. This is a promising and relatively "cold" possibility to win a way out from the deadly "hot" situation where we are in. Brace our WILL, free ourselves from overexaggerated FEAR that makes men think of "supine surrender", start and conduct our preparations wisely and vigorously, and we will win.
